Egypt sending back | 7 Syrian envoy to Israel

CAIRO (AP). — Egypt's ambas-sador to Israel, Sa'ad Mortada, who was recalled last September to protest against the massacre of Palestinian refugees in Beirut's Sabra and Shatilla refugee camps, is expected to return to Tel Aviv by the end of the month, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said yesterday.

Asked if the envoy's return would mean the end of the protest, spokesman Raouf Ghoneim replied: Yes, yes, and relations on ambassadorial level will be restored."

Ghoneim said Mortada would return before he left the Foreign Ministry at the mandatory retirement age of 60 in July. A new ambassador to Israel would likely be named "in the very near future," he said it would not return its ambassador to Israel until a timetable for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon had been set.

The Egyptian government had

Ghoneim said that the agreement between Israel and Lebanon on the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon had met this condition.

The recall of the ambassador constituted the most serious strain in relations between Egypt and Israel since they established full diplomatic ties after the signing of the peace treaty on March 26, 1979.

President Hosni Mubarak had described the recall as the "least" Egypt could do to express its diseasure with Israel's invasion of Lebanon and the massacre in the Israeli-held camps outside Beirut by Lebanese Christians.

Soviets want Syrians out of Lebanon—Arens

Post Knesset Correspondent

Defence Minister Moshe Arens yesterday said there are indications that the Soviet Union prefers Syria to withdraw its troops from Lebanon and not to keep them on Lebanese soil.

"We have information to that effect," Arens told the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee. "The present situation is causing the Soviet Union certain difficulties from which it wants to extricate itself."

Arens said that since a Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon is in Israel's own interests, and since both the Arab world and the West insist that Syria should pull its troops out, Israel would be wrong to state that it can live with some continued Syrian presence on Lebanese

The Defence Minister said that while it is true that Syria is still unwilling to open talks on withdrawal, the Government believes that Syria will be impelled to consider withdrawal seriously because the Arab world no longer recognizes the legitimacy of its presence in Lebanon. Moreover, he said, the presence of the IDF is "uncomfortable" for Syria.

Withdrawal or not, he said, Syria is doing all it can to sabotage the Israel-Lebanon agreement. It will not balk at undermining the Amin Jemayel regime or even at assassinating the Lebanese President.

soldiers killed in ambush

BEIRUT (Reuter). - Seven Syrian soldiers, including two colonels, were killed yesterday in a midafternoon gun and bomb ambush on a seaside highway south of the Lebanese port of Tripoli, security sources said.

The sources said unidentified gunmen detonated a roadside bomb as two jeeploads of Syrian troops were passing by at Enfeh, 15 kilometres from the port.

As the jeeps exploded in smoke and flame, the attackers opened heavy gunfire from hiding, killing the two colonels and five soldiers, the sources said.

The Christian Phalangist Radio also reported seven Syrians killed in the ambush. It said two were lieutenant-colonels and one a captain. The gunmen had detonated a roadside car bomb by shooting at it, the radio said.

It was one of the biggest attacks to date on Syrian troops in Lebanon, where they occupy most of the north and large areas of the Bekaa valley in the east.

The ambush followed an incident earlier in the day in which three Syrian soldiers were wounded when their ammunition-loaded truck blew up only a kilometre from the scene of the attack on the jeeps. Local security officials said the first explosion was an accident. The security officials and Lebanese radio stations gave no indication of who may have been behind the ambush. The Tripoli area, under Syrian army control, is roamed by various Palestinian guerrilla factions, as well as by Christian and numerous Moslem militias. It has been the scene of regular clashes for several months between the militias, often

Doctors reacted cautiously last night to the "brand-new proposal" for renewing the wage talks that was hammered out yesterday by Finance Minister Yoram Aridor and Health Minister Eliezer Shostak, under the vigorous direct intervention of Prime Minister Menachem

In a day of intensive meetings and almost non-stop consultations, Begin threw his full weight behind the effort to find a solution to the 112-day strike, and, more urgently, to put a stop to the doctors' nationwide hunger strike.

All details of the "new proposal" were being kept a closely-guarded secret last night. It was understood, however, that the two ministers agreed essentially to "start from scratch" and build an entirely new salary structure for the doctors. None of the parties involved was willing to say how much the new offer deviated from the 22-per- cent limit imposed by the national collective wage agreement.

The doctors are scheduled to meet this afternoon, probably in Jerusalem, to receive full details of the new proposal. The invitation was issued by Health Ministry Director-General Baruch Modan last night in the name of all the employers.

initial reactions from the Israel Medical Association were more cautious than optimistic. IMS spokesman Dr. Shmuel Friedman said that the doctors had not yet received any official invitation to renew the talks, nor had any details of the "new" proposal been explained.

"We are willing to resume the talks at any time and any place, and simultaneously to end the hunger strike, but only if two basic conditions are included in the new offer. These two conditions, without which we will not proceed, are: setting the doctors' work week at 36 hours, and setting the starting basic salary for young doctors at the national average monthly salary," Friedman told The Jerusalem Post

He made it clear that salaries for senior doctors would have to proceed upwards from this starting point, based on grade and seniority. It was also clear that the doctors would refuse to incorporate various elements of their current pay cheques, such as extra-duty pay, into the basic salary in order to achieve the rise they demand.

"In view of the Treasury's behaviour during the four months of preceding it, I am reluctant to express any optimism at this point, There have been too many lies, and false hopes and too much general disregard in the Treasury's attitude towards us to believe these reports without hearing further details,"

The new proposal was described as being based on a suggestion worked out by the Health Ministry, which the Treasury found acceptable. The proposal called a "real turning-point" by sources close to the talks, emerged yesterday evening from the ministers' second meeting with Begin during the day.

Aridor kept Begin and Shostak waiting in the Knesset building for several hours while he was reportedly closeted with his advisers to work out the costs involved in the new proposal. The evening meeting, which was originally scheduled to start at 4 p.m., did not get under way until 7:45, when Aridor finally

With more than 1,500 doctors fasting in 23 hospitals throughout the country, Begin yesterday decided that he would "do everything possible to extricate the two ministers from the dead end they have obviously got themselves into. Setting a new direction will allow the talks to get moving again," a source close to the prime minister told The Post yester-

Begin's plunge into the "thick of things," after three and a half months of sitting on the sidelines, began yesterday morning with a two-hour meeting with Shostak and

The three were joined at noon by a delegation of seven doctors from Soroka Hospital in Beersheba, some of whom have been fasting for seven days. The prime minister was "moved almost to tears" as the doctors took turns explaining that their deep worry about the deteriorating state of health care during the 112day strike had led them to begin their hunger strike, one source said.

The doctors noted that they were not "negotiators" and had not been authorized by the IMA to conduct апу wage talks.

Bgin also made it clear that he was not prepared to "negotiate over numbers and percentages." He wished rather to determine the general principle under which further wage talks could be got under way.

While the doctors described to Begin their low salaries and difficult working conditions, they stressed that they had not taken the 'desperate final step of fasting"

Lebanese inquiry said to blame Israel for massacres

BEIRUT (Reuter). - An official Lebanese inquiry into last September's Palestinian refugee camp massacres in Beirut holds Israel legally responsible, but does not specify who carried out the killings, judicial sources here said yesterday.

The sources quoted a report to be published by Lebanon's military prosecutor, Assad Germanos, as saying 460 people were killed in the 48-hour massacres at the Sabra and Shatilla camps.

The report does not specify who carried out the actual killings, but implies that the murderers included militiamen under Major Sa'ad Haddad, as well as other Christian militias, the sources said.

The report says: "Armed elements other than the Israeli army" carried out the massacres last September 17 and 18. These were probably "border elements," it says, according to the sources. This was apparently a reference to Haddad's men, who operate on the Lebanese-Israeli border.

But those who entered the camps also included "those harmed by Palestinian violations," the sources quoted the report as saying.

This was seen here as a reference to Christian militiamen from either Beirut or surrounding areas. The massacres occurred a few days after Lebanon's presidentelect Bashir Jemayel, previously the leader of the Christian militia known as the Lebanese Forces, was assassinated. The current president, Amin Jemayel, is his brother.

The report lists names of those killed. It says they included 269 Palestinians, 119 Lebanese, 11 Syrians, 32 Pakistanis or Iranians. two Egyptians, two Algerians and 25 unidentified persons.

The sources said the report holds Israel responsible legally for what happened in the Sabra and Shatilla camps and the resulting victims, because these forces were in full control of the two camps, their entrances and the surrounding area." It says there was no proof that the Politics of academic freedom on West Bank university campuses

Students and faculty at the an-Najah university in Nablus yesterday protested against the closure of their campus for the next three months by the Israel Defence Forces as "a threat to academic freedom." They also said that the closure denied the Palestinian people the right to express their. national and cultural identity."

But the same students are apparently not willing to extend such academic freedom to eight of their lecturers, who, with the support of the university administration and the endorsement of at least part of the PLO, have signed a watereddown version of what was once a contentious application for work permits issued by the Israeli civil administration.

Something of the divisiveness and the contradictions of Palestinian politics emerged at a news conference held by an-Najah at the American Colony Hotel in Jerusalem yesterday to protest against the Israeli action.

While an-Najah's spokesman. Sa'eb Erakat, praised the "moral and ethical courage" of Hebrew University mathematics professor Shaul Foguel of the Israel Solidarity Committee with the West Bank Universities, who also participated in the press conference, the head of the university's student council, Adnan Dumeri, reaffirmed the student's boycott of the lecturers on grounds of national solidarity.

Dumeri who was released from the Far'a detention camp outside Nablus only on Sunday night after almost two weeks in detention, dramatically removed a checked keffiyeh to illustrate one of his complaints about treatment there. His head had been shaved:

Dumeri, who spent six years in an Israeli prison for security offences, among them undergoing military training in Syria, alleged that prisoners who resisted were bound hand and foot and then shaven.

Military sources responded by saying that detainees were shaved by another detainee, and during Dumeri's period in the camp by another student from an-Najah as part of the camp's normal hygienic

But-Dumeri replied with slogars claiming that "All the students are under the same light," and "All the Palestinians are in the same boat. If someone makes a hole, we all sink."

An-Najah was closed on June 5 after what its spokesman said had started off as a peaceful demonstration on the anniversary of the Six Day War and the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. He charged that the IDF had escalated the confrontation by using riot gas, rubber bullets and eventually, live rounds. He confirmed, however, that only 200 students out of a student body of about 3.000 had participated in a demonstration outside the campus

This minority cannot be blamed for playing into the hands of the IDF, as it were, and provoking the closure, since "One can't control student's emotions," he said, pointing to clashes at Israeli universities for comparison.

Erakat confirmed that eight out of 28 lecturers who had been forced to stop teaching and in some cases to leave the West Bank after refusing to sign the work-permit applica-tion have returned. They were not able to resume teaching because of the boycott declared by students at all four West Bank universities. An-Najah has presumably been saved further embarrassment on the issue by the IDF's closure of its campus. The application was originally rejected in its earlier format as being a "loyalty oath," because it specifically committed any appli-cant not to support the PLO, which was defined as a "terrorist organization." The lecturers opposed this as an unwarranted interference with their academic freedom, and the form was eventually modified to make a standard and banal declaration to obey all laws and military orders in force in the administered areas.

This formula was accepted by the lecturers, endorsed by the univer-sity administrations and evently approved by the PLO. One of Yasser Arafat's deputies, Abu Jihad (Khalil Wazir), personally accompanied the eight lecturers to the Jordan bridges on their return and the Voice of Palestine, which now broadcasts from Baghdad, announced on May 27 that a compromise had been worked out.

Dumeri said yesterday that "the PLO did not hide this kind of decision, which has not been conveyed to the students in any way.' Moreover, the students are opposed to it because they see it as the first step in implementing Military Order 854, which would give an Israeli staff oficer supervision over the curriculum and academic activities of all of the Palestinian universities.

The civil administration has agreed to freeze the application of the order until the next academic

Erekat and Dumeiri said that the closure of the university for three months means that about 700 students will be unable to graduate this

Arab sources in East Jerusalem and Jewish observers have said that the dispute between the students and the university administrations partly reflects tensions within the PLO. The student councils are backing the rebels within Fatah and the more radical organizations within the PLO while the university administrations are more moderate and conservative.

Erakat said yesterday that Foguel's presence at the news conference "was a clear message to all Palestinians that there is a segment in Israeli society with the moral courage to stand up for Palestinian rights. There are those of us on both sides who believe that the

Two possible candidates are Justice Minister Moshe Nissim and Jewish Agency Chairman Arye Dulzin. The latter, however, does not enjoy easy rapport with Begin. His relations with the prime minister have in the past been strained, and he is on bad terms with some Liberal factions.

If the Liberals cannot agree on either a truce or a compromise candidate, Likud insiders predict a noholds-barred struggle in the party. This could destroy it, and shake up the entire Likud, and possibly the entire coalition.

There is also the question of who will be the next Liberal chairman. One line of thought in the party is that there is really no need for a new arman, since the role never existed before the 1980 party convention and then was tailor-made for Ehrlich. This position, too, could be kept unfilled indefinitely, to avoid the disintegration of that strife-torn

Fraud squad investigates illegal building in Tel Aviv

By MICHAL YUDELMAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The police fraud squad, headed by Nitzav-Mishne Eitan Golan, is investigating how the Tel Aviv municipality permitted the construction of private offices on an entire floor in a residential building in North Tel Aviv.

A private engineer was permitted to build some 160 square metres, despite the official policy of moving offices out of residential areas.

The regional urban planning commission is also investigating how the engineer received building permits, and looking into complaints by residents that the engineer forged their signatures, which were required for the per-

The residents of Yellin Street, near Kikar Hamedina, signed contracts that specified that the building would be used for residential purposes only.

"This file stinks," a senior source in the engineering department said several weeks ago, when The Jerusalem Post asked to examine the file on 6 Yellin Street.

However, the official said he could do nothing about it, because all the permits seemed to be in order. The residents' complaint that their signatures were forged and that the ground floor was not intended for offices has been ignored by the city's legal adviser for more than nine years.

Documents showing that the city had already torn down illegal construction on the ground floor had mysteriously vanished from the file. The city told the residents that the floor was really a basement and therefore building on it was permitted. A few days ago, one of the residents found the missing documents in another file in the engineering department's archives, and presented them to the city's legal

JERUSALEM POST POLL More support for MDs than for Treasury

By SARAH HONIG ... Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. - More people support Finance Ministry in the dispute over physicians' pay. This was found by the latest Jerusalem Post poll, conducted before the current spate of hunger strikes threatened to immobilize the hospitals.

The poll was conducted by the Modi'in Ezrahi Social Research Institute under the direction of Dr. Sarah Shemer. A representative sample of 1,195 persons were interviewed between June 1 and June 10.

According to the poll, 29 per cent of those asked supported the Finance Ministry, and 35 per cent sided with the striking doctors. Another 19 per cent sympathized equally with both sides, and 11 per cent did not sympathize with either side. The remaining 6 per cent did not reply.

Shemer said that the results did not indicate a "categorical identification" with either side.

interviewees were also asked whether doctors ought to be recognized as a special group whose salaries should be considered separately from the overall wage packages. According to 44.4 per cent, the doctors deserve special status, but 42.5 per cent said they do not. Twelve per cent did not know and the rest did not reply.

State Comptroller Yitzhak Tunik will deal with complaints from the public concerning the Finance Ministry's handling of the West German pension schemes in his capacity as ombudsman. Tunik reported this decision to the Knesset State Control Committee yesterday during its debate on the scheme. The committee was unanimous in its criticism of the Finance Ministry's decision to prevent Israelis from joining the schemes.

The Treasury's newest regulations state that only Israeli citizens who joined such schemes as residents of foreign countries, or who joined them in Israel and started paying into them prior to June 12, 1983, will be able to participate in such plans and receive payments from them.

The committee said that this regulation is a gross error, since the pension plan is a result of a Social Security Treaty signed between Israel and the German Federal Republic in 1975 and 1978, and effective since 1980.

The committee is expected to decide in the near future whether to ask the State Comptroller to examine the Finance Ministry's deci-

Ghanaians ordered to turn in arms after coup is foiled

ABIDJAN. - Ghana's ruling council was back in control yesterday 24 hours after an unsuccessful coup attempt that underlined the country's chronic instability.

Sunday's mutiny, by rebel soldiers, was at least the fourth attempt to overthrow the present government, which came to power in a military coup on December 31, government yes ordered Ghanains to turn in all arms and ammunition in their possession by 6 p.m. local time today and to be on the lookout for rebel fugitives, according to Accra Radio.

A broadcast announcement by the ruling Provisional Defence Council said that anyone failing to report dissidents hiding in their homes would face "revolutionary action."

In a radio broadcast Sunday night, Flight Lieutenant Jerry Rawlings, Ghana's military head of state, said that several people had been killed and several others arrested. He called on dissidents still at large to surrender.

Ghana's once-prosperous cocoabased economy, which made it the most flourishing West African nation at independence from Britain in 1957, has been hit recently by crop failures, food shortages and the return from Nigeria of one million Ghanaians.

They were expelled by Nigeria after going there in search of jobs, attracted by the oil industry. (Reuter, AP)

Soviet attacks U.S. treatment of Jews

MOSCOW (Reuter). - The head of the Soviet Union's Anti-Zionist Committee yesterday attacked the U.S. authorities, saying they connived at anti-Semitism there.

Commenting on recent U.S. criticism of the Committee, General David Dragunsky said discrimination against Jews was rife in the U.S.

"Bombing and setting fire to synagogues, desecration of Jewish graves, swastikas on houses where Jews live, assaults on youths and threats of physical violence - all of this has become an everyday part of the American way of life," he said.

Soviet Jew to stand trial on slander charge

MOSCOW (AP). - Yuri Tarnopolsky, a 46-year-old Jewish scientist who has been trying to emigrate to Israel, will go on trial in his hometown of Kharkov next week on charges of standering the Soviet state, his wife said yesterday.

Mrs. Tarnopolsky said her husband's trial was set for June 29. The charge carries a maximum punishment of three years in a labour camp or five years' internal exile.

The Trustees will consider the latest report from the Committee of the Council for Higher Education, which said that university education and scientific research are quickly falling to a point that will harm all areas of Israel's society and economy. The Board will examine ways of solving the University's serious financial difficulties.

Bar-Ilan University is holding its annual Commencement Exercises on campus today. At the ceremony, presided over by Professor Emanuel Rackman, President of the University, Honorary Doctorates will be conferred on Dr. Leon Fill, Mr. Morton Tarter and Dr. Arno A. Penzias. Thirty Ph.D degrees and 180 Masters degrees will be conferred on students. In addition, over one thousand Bachelor degrees and diploma certificates will be awarded.

Mr. Morton Tarter is a financial executive and philanthropist. He is a major contributor to social welfare and educational projects both in the United States and in Israel. A native of New York City, Mr. Tarter earned a B.B.A. degree from the College of the City of New York, Mr. Tarter is particularly concerned with furthering religious education.

Dr. Leon Fill, a distinguished medical expert, is a member of the University's Global Board of Trustees. Dr. Fill received numerous decorations from the United States Army and retired from the Medical Corps with the rank of captain, Dr. Fill is active in community leadership and charitable activities, particulary in his native town of Detroit. Michigan. .

Dr. Arno A. Penzias, recipient of the 1978 Nobel Prize in Physics, is known throughout the scientific world for his discovery of cosmic background radiation. Dr. Penzias is dedicated both to science and to the traditions of the Jewish people. He is active in the struggle to free Soviet science, or Torah Im Derech Eretz, or better yet — the totality of all worthwhile learning, Jewish and non-Jewish."

Professor Michael Albeck, Rector, says that the task of any University is to maintain a high level of research and education, while the task of Bar-Ilan is even greater — to maintain the Jewish heritage.

Professor Rackman reports that there has been growth in every area of the University — student enrollment, course offerings, facilities, equipment, publications, endowment funds. At the same time there was unrelenting concern for the basic mission of the University not simply the advancement of higher education but especially the eternity of the Jewish people and the Jewish heritage.

Professor Rackman, although

The rector reports that the University's budget this year amounts to IS 1.1 billion. The decrease in government support continues, although there has been no increase in donations. Prof. Albeck warns that the financial situation of the University is growing serious. There are five buildings under construction on the campus which will satisfy some of the space needs. There is a severe shortage of dormitory facilities, which prevents the University from increasing the number of students from abroad.

The university does not plan to increase the number of Israeli students beyond 10,000 in the next five years. There is a strong desire to maintain the direct contact that exists between students and faculty at Bar-Ilan. The rector reports that the number of academic personnel must be increased in order to maintain the existing standard of education. The University will make an effort to recruit world-known researchers and scientists who are suitable for Bar-Ilan. There are plans to send young talented personnel abroad for further specialization in their field on the condition that they will return to the University and teach for a number projects. The University is interested in strengthening research in Jewish Studies. Such research, however, demands huge resources. Mr. David Altman, Director-General, reports that in spite of difficult financial problems. Bar-Ilan has set goals aimed at providing the best: possible means and conditions for the teaching and research that will continue to enhance the University's reputation among the academic community in Israel and abroad.

The rector notes that Bar-lian is well known for its extensive research

Campus Expansion

After many years of relatively little new building, the campus is now undergoing a radical change as new dormitories and departmental building rapidly develop. On the edge of the campus, the new Wolfson Dormitory is now complete and occupied. The Gruss Student Residence is dramatically altering the skyline of the expanded campus on the Givat Shmuel side of the University. At long last the Torah Complex is taking shape with the erection of the Bruce and Ruth Rappaport Building for the Faculty of Jewish Studies and the Institute of Higher Torah learning and the Midrasha for Girls — both buildings donated by Mr. & Mrs. Ludwig Jesselson. A focal point of this complex will be the magnificent Beit Hamidrash as well as the Michael and Yonat Floersheim Judaica Museum.

The shell of Beit Aliza and Menachem Begin which will house the Institute for Research into the Resistance and Underground Movements is also nearing completion and is on schedule for occupation by early 1984. This building will also house the Bar-Ilan University Press.

For most of its years, the Gymnasia has focused on educating the elite. Founded in 1908, it was the first school of its kind in Jerusalem and the second in Palestine, after that in Herzliya. The school differed from others of its day in that all subjects were taught in Hebrew. It also took the daring step 75 years ago of mixing boys and girls. The founders, who included Yitzhak and Rahel Ben-Tzvi, stressed quality and high intellectual standards. The school was first housed in Zichron Moshe. and occupied four different premises before moving to today's location in

Innon Shenker, 22, a graduate of the class of '79, is a reporter for Gale: Zahai (the army radio station.) He is the youngest member of the committee that organized the celebrations. While many forgot about high school shortly after graduation, Innon has a special feeling for his aims mater. The school, with roots in the community, helps him appreciate his own roots. Innon says that the school's home-room teachers give all of themselves in imparting values to the students, including the spirit of volunteering.

A list of the school's graduates reads like a Who's Who. Many are found in academia, law, medicine. the army, politics, commerce, journalism and even business. They include Ramai and Assaf Caspi, Hannah Rivlin, Ephraim and Aaron Katzir, Yigael and Yosef Yadin, Shmuel Tamir, Amos Oz, A.B. Yehoshua, Yona Selah, Akiva Rakhmilevitch, Uzi Narkis, Nissan Harpaz Danny Angel and many, many more.

A RECENT innovation is the abolition of formal subject majors; students can now build their own curricula. Though there are certain basic requirements, students have the flexibility to concentrate on their favourite subjects.

Nearly everyone I asked believes there is very little difference in quality and intellectual ability between today's students and those of 30, 40 and even 50 years ago. More than one old-timer remarked that then it was classical music, and today it's pop, disco and rock; in the old days, students and faculty were " better dressed, now it's castial, these audents to a class, and at first clothes. The class of '79 takes the credit for getting rid of the standard school uniform of jeans and yellow T-shirt..

Are modern students more distracted, what with TV, video games, stereo, disco and motorbikes? No. say some of the older graduates. In pre-state days they had curfews, the Haganah, and varied groups' philosophies and ideologies vying for the students' attention and time.

BUT THE school certainly has changed. The word today is "integration." In 1974, a small number of students from culturally disadvantaged backgrounds or not quite up to Gymnasia standards were absorbed into existing classes. There were about seven or eight of the project was conducted very quietly. The results have been good, with better than 90 per cent passing bagrut (matriculation exams). In general, over 80% of the school's

Today, a junior high school (hativat benaim) is attached to the Gymnasia. The 1982-83 school year saw the beginnings of a major integration project with the new students coming from three schools in: Rehavia, Givat Mordechai and Baka. They account for approximately one third of the seventh grade class.

graduates go on to university.

Last September, 110 students from the Geulim A school in Baka began their school year with students from the educationally stronger elementary schools.

Successful integration doesn't just happen; it takes planning on several levels. Ruth Leket, adviser to the junior high school, has dealt with the problems of reducing the gap between culturally disadvantaged students and those from ad-vantaged homes. She concedes that sometimes the best and the weakest students suffer from mixed classes, and that there was considerable parental opposition at the outset of the arrangement. But she believes that the year has proven the success of the project, and it will continue next year with minor modifications.

How does one prepare students for integration, which ideally should begin in kindergarten? The school provides the formal structure, but it is the informal contacts which really count. It is in the hallways, on the street, and in extra-curricular activities where the students from Rehavia and Baka will meet and form attitudes.

ONE HUNDRED and eight Gymnasia graduates have given their lives in defence of Israel. The list includes teachers, the sons of prominent Jerusalem families, such as Yoni Natanyahu, of the Entebbe raid, and Eitan Avni, who recently fell in Lebanon.

A major feature of Sunday's ceremonies was the dedication of a memorial wall - constructed entirely by students. Moving along the wall from right to left, one moves through history, from the War of Independence to the Lebanese war. The wall ends in a corner, with the implied message of "please, no more war!"

I asked nearly everyone I met the following question: What kind of person does the school want to produce? Among the answers was: The creation of intellecutals and thinkers who are prepared to deal with life. One young graduate thought that students should be taught how to change a tire and how to deal with the police. A veteran teacher thought the goal should be the developing of good citizens.

The school has established its own traditions and formulae for success. With the current trend towards integration, it may end up as a comprehensive high school. As society becomes increasingly technological, the fields of work and expertise in the sciences and hunanities chosen by the school's graduates are indeed important.

in a world where the value and meaning of the individual is shrinking, it is the human and moral values that count. Let us hope that the Gymnasia continues to meet the test of education for humanity.

 The anniversary celebrations will conclude this evening with a reunion of all classes at Hutzot Hayotzer at 7 p.m.

I LIKE ABIE Nathan - who doesn't? Recently, Abie's Peace Ship has been broadcasting an hour of Russian folk music every day, from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. The programme includes sentimental old ditties and some of those lovely, lilting Russian waltzes from the turn of the century that our parents used to dance to.

We wondered whether he was organizing a Russian request programme for Soviet soldiers now stationed in Syria.

'Not at all." answered Abie, in deadly earnest. Apparently, the programme came about in response to requests made by newcomers from Russia who used to buttonhole him every time his ship dropped

Five outstanding industrialists honoured

By MACABEE DEAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Five prizes for outstanding industrialists — one to Mark Mosevics for his "life's work" in helping to build up the country's industry — are being awarded tonight at the Hilton Hotel here by the Manufacturers Association. The awards will be made by President Chaim Herzog.

Mosevics, who was born in Riga, settled here in 1940, and joined his father at Elite, which his father helped found. From 1959 to 1975. he also served in various public capacities, including chairman of the Export Institute and chairman of the executive of the Manufacturers Association. In 1969 he was elected president of the association, a post he held for six years. At the same time he chaired the coordinating committee of the economic organizations.

Today, Mosevics is board chairman of Danot Investments, FIBI, and the First International Bank.

Haim Yaron, board chairman of Cyclone, settled here in 1933. He is a graduate of the Technion, and IDF with the rank of Tat-Aluf and he joined Cyclone. In 1982, the company's sales increased by 216 per cent and its exports by 358 per cent. Profits also rose. Yaron is also active in various aspects of public Yitzhak Loevy, managing director of Electra, was born in Poland. In the Second World War he served in the South African army and then settled in Israel. He was a founder of Kibbutz Mayan Baruch. He joined Electra in 1949 and became managing director in 1974.

Much of Electra's output is the result of local R & D, and every year the firm has introduced at least three new products on the market. Electra exports to the U.S., UK. Australia, Nigeria, as well as to other countries in Europe and Africa, In 1982, production stood at $60 million, of which $8.2m. was exported. Profits were $5m.

Kalman Kaufman, who was born in Argentina, settled here in 1967. Until 1975 he lived at Kibbutz Hahoterim. He joined Kulso in 1975, and headed the project which after 27 years of military service developed the "wafer saw," which (including the Palmah), he left the cuts silicon for the microelectronics industry. Exports in 1982 were $4m.

Michael Strauss, who came here from Germany in 1936, is a graduate of the Maritime School in Acre. He also studied in Switzerland and at Harvard University. He joined his father (the late Dr. Richard Strauss) at Strauss dairies, and since the death of his father in 1975 has managed the firm. During the past five years, sales have increased 3.3 times and profits 4.7 times, in real terms. In 1982, sales were more than $31m. Strauss is also active in public affairs, which include the chairmanship of the Friends of Nahariya Hospital.

Tourism too expensive here, UK man complains

By MICHAL YUDELMAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. — Prices in Israel are atrociously high, Tim Lovell, of the British Tourism Authority's Middle East region, said yesterday. "If a cafe owner in England charged me IS400 for four scoops of ice cream on a waffle, as they do on Dizengoff Street here. I'd throw the ice cream in his face," Lovell said.

Lovell noted that Cafe Pilz charged IS780 for a fillet steak, an exhorbitant price, while one round of water skiing on Lake Kinneret cost IS800. Taxi rides are far more expensive here than in England. "These prices are impossible, no wonder you don't get as many tourists as you'd like to," he said. The number of Israelis going to Britain last year increased by 21 per cent over the previous year. This was the highest rate of increase for tourism to Britain from any country, Lovell said. Some 92,400 Israelis visited Britain last year, spending some £35 million. This year about 110,000 are expected, he

Bank Hapoalim's Silver Rose award

By HYAM CORNEY LONDON, - Lord Derek Ezra former chairman of Britain's National Coal Board, and Monty Sumray, who recently retired as chairman of the British-Israel Chamber of Commerce, were the joint recipients of Bank Hapoalim's annual Silver Rose Award, given for outstanding contributions to the development of British-Israel

trade.

Lord Ezra received his award at a lunch here on Monday for his guiding role-in the negotiation of an agreement to supply Israel with British coal and coal technologies," which has led to coal becoming Britain's newest export to Israel. Lord Ezra, who is Jewish, went to Israel to negotiate a wide-ranging agreement with Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i to supply the raw material and the coal usage knowhow which Israel needed to diversify its energy supply.

Monty Sumray, who resigned the chairmanship of the British-Israel Chamber of Commerce last month after four years in office, received his award for his "outstanding contribution to the development of bilateral trade between Britain and Israel, which reached a record level of £500 million last year, with an increase of British exports of six per cent over the previous year."

The awards were presented by Bank Hapoalim chairman Efraim Reiner. Presiding at the lunch was Trevor Chinn, chairman of the bank's UK advisory board. Martin Mendoza, who succeeded Sumray as chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that in the first four months of this year, there had been a 16 per cent increase in trade between Britain and Israel compared with the same period last year. But because of fear of the Arab boycott, "thousands of jobs and much business" had been lost,

Oil consumption still falling, BP says

LONDON (Reuter). - World oil consumption is still declining, following a 10 per cent drop between 1979 and 1982, British Petroleum

(BP) said yesterday. Launching the company's annual statistical review of world energy, BP trading manager Bryan Sanderson said: "At this moment demand is still going down. It has not quite flattened out yet."

The review shows that oil consumption went down by three per cent in 1982 alone, a year of crisis for OPEC in which it had to face the consequences of a prolonged world oil glut. According to BP, output from the 13-member OPEC slumped by 17. per cent last year and was overtake for the first time by non-OPEC and pliers, such as Britain, Mexico the Soviet Union.

The BP experts saw lifts prospect that economic recovery the West would boost oil demand the record levels of the 1970s. The noted that the effects of recession and energy substitution in Weste Europe accounted for a 36 per cel drop in demand for fuel oil over ten-year period.

IS57.4 b. in Hapoalim provident funds

Jerusalem Post Resorter FEL AVIV. — Total assets of Bank Hapoalim's provident funds reached IS 57.4 billion at the end of 1982, or 32 per cent of all provident funds held directly by Israeli banks. In 1980, Hapoalim's percentage in these funds was only 29.7 per cent and last year it was 30.9 per cent.

Bank Hapoalim also manages funds for others, and if the bank's own provident funds, plus these others, are considered jointly, total assets at the end of 1982 reached IS73.9b.

Hapoalim's share in funds for advanced study has also grown.

$3 billion OPEC deficit

BASLE (Reuter). - Member n tions of OPEC had a combine balance of payments deficit of billion last year, the Bank for Inte national Settlements said recently In its 1982/83 annual report ti BIS said OPEC countries' balance of payments were hit by the wor recession and high interest rates oil exports to the industrialize countries fell sharply. OPEC countries also faced in creasing competition from no

OPEC oil producers, it added. The figures reversed the trend OPEC balance of payments an pluses in recent years, which peaked in 1980 at 5114 billion as continued in 1981 at $63b.

Real estate shares fall sharply

TEL AVIV. - Real estate and land development shares fell sharply vesterday, with the sector as a hole losing 6.19%. The decline in this group was enough to drag down the General Share Index, commercial bank excepted, by 0.91%. The only other group to fall was that of the oil shares. All other sectors were ahead nicely, generally by margins of less than one per cent. Turnovers continued to ease and were barely above the IS600 million mark.

There were six "sellers only" situations and two securities wound up as "buyers only." While 36 issues fell by more than 5%, another 30 were up by more than that margin. This fairly even balance was indicative off the overall stance of the market.

Trading in index-linked bonds came to a near standstill, as only 1S137m., changed hands. Prices were little changed. The shekel was devalued by 28 agorot against the

.The 0.1 shares of the Maritime Bank provided the centre of action in the commercial bank group. On Sunday the shares were ahead bynearly 10%. Yesterday they were clipped for a 5.2% loss. The yo-yo like action has confounded most observers. Perhaps what they forget is that the Maritime Bank shares are unlike those of most other commercial banks. The management of the bank has not indicated that it is "stabilizing" its shares.

The management of FIBI has also refrained from "stabilizing" pracices. FIBI's general manager Zadik Bino has often stated publicly that he opposes "stabilization." The FiBI shares eased by 2.1%. The First International Bank shares were 2.4% lower, while both Danot shares were up by about 1.5%. Danot again announced that it intends to maintain control of the First International Bank and that at present it is not negotiating the sale of any of these shares.

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN

There was little action in the mortgage bank group and prices seesawed within a narrow range. Binyan was the exception, as it advanced by a full 10%.

insurance shares were slightly higher. Securitas 0.1 was the best performer with a gain of 6.1%. The options provided the big excitement among service and trade securities. Harel option 2 was ahead by 19.4%. The Time option, however, was down by a full 25%. Land development, real estate and citrus shares unaccountably were sharply lower. Newly issued Amnonim came under selling pressure and was clipped for a 10% loss. The option, which debuted on Sunday, was 6% lower. Arazim was nearly 5% lower, but the option was clobbered for a drop of 16.3%. The Darad option, by contrast, gallopped ahead by 13:1%. Mishnael 5.0 was 13.2% lower. Neot Aviv moved down by 7.6%, while Solel Boneh was a 15% loser.

Among industrials, Elbit eased by 1.3%, while Elron, the parent company, was up by less than half of one per cent. Vitalgo 1.0 was 9.2% lower. The Zikit shares were up by as much as 7.3%, while the option, which traded earlier in the day, was buffeted for a 27.2% loss.

In the investment company group Eliern was up by 10%. The veteran investment company is a major shareholder in the Israel Can Company, which will come to the market early next week, with a first-time public financing offer. Ampa was "sellers only" and the option was down by 12.7%.

While the action of the share market has been less than impressive over the past two sessions, many observers are undisturbed and even express a measure of guarded optimism. They suggest that the tenor of the market could easily improve and prices could resume a slow upward course. In any case, they consider moderate movements, in either direction. preferable to sharp up or down movements. "Any sharp downward movement could easily destroy the public's recently recovered confidence," commented one observer.

Property and Building announced yesterday that Naveh, a fully owned subsidiary, had purchased the last 20% held by the Goldstein Brothers in the Gad Company.

Ehrlich leaves a vacuum

THE PASSING of Simha Ehrlich is, in the first place, a cruel blow to the Liberal Party, which might have broken apart — and even disappeared from the political map — long ago without the leadership of the man who, in a true sense, was deputy to the prime minister.

In terms of voter allegiance, the Liberals, for all their vaunted 18 Knesset Members, are one of the country's smallest parties. In fact they are less a party than a haphazard collection of warring interest groups sporting allegedly liberal (actually conservative) slogans. What kept the Liberals from splintering into oblivion was, in large measure, Mr. Ehrlich's ability to weld them into a useful instrument for his friend and benefactor, Menachem Begin.

With Simha Ehrlich gone, centrifugal pressures among the Liberals may become irresistible. Even if the will to survive as a party - overcomes their tendency to disintegration, the Liberals will find it hard to maintain their present inflated position within the Likud. The call within Herut for a "unification of the Likud" — meaning the swallowing up of the Liberals by Herut — is likely to rise more insistently than

At the very least Mr. Begin may now feel less obligated to adhere to the original Gahal agreement of 1965 which froze for the future the Liberal and Herut power ratios at that time. Since then Herut has accumulated greater power while the Liberals have steadily lost popular support.

Thus the Liberals may have no choice but to reconcile themselves to their true, diminutive size. By resisting the inevitable, they may bring the government down. But they - or, in any case, the resisters among them — are liable to find themselves merely out in the cold, a party of faction chiefs with hardly any following at all.

Pollution and balagan

TOXIC WASTE from factories threatens to pollute the country, yet no-one seems to care, least of all the responsible authorities.

Israel's only certified site for the disposal of toxic waste materials at Ramat Hovav, south of Beersheba, was closed 14 months ago following a fire. Meanwhile tens of thousands of tons of such material have been making their way into the ecosystem as a result of pirate dumping. The three government ministries that should have provided a solution — Health, Interior, and Commerce and Industry — are busy shifting the blame from one to the other.

As a series of articles on the problem in The Jerusalem Post last week clearly indicated, pirate dumping is the most "convenient" way for factories to get rid of their toxic wastes. To be sure, there are laws designed to curb this dangerous practice. But there is little enforcement of the laws, and factories are left to police themselves, which they manifestly fail to do.

The resulting damage to the environment is alarming. The quality of the air people breathe and the water they drink is steadily deteriorating. The effects, however, may not be immediately felt, except in the most polluted localities, such as Haifa, Ashdod and Beersheba. This may account for public apathy to the issue of toxic waste disposal. Unless the public wakes up to the dangers facing it, the authorities, both local and central, are unlikely to take any particular action.

Yet action must be taken, and urgently. The first order of business should be the reopening of the Ramat Hovav site. But this will take time — one year at least, even if work were to start right away. In the meantime factories must be made by local authorities to pre-treat their wastes, store them in properly labelled drums, and fence them. Oil sludge must not be allowed to be dumped indiscriminately.

When the Ramat Hovav site is operational again, the central government authorities must see to it that the toxic garbage is transferred to the site, by hauling it there themselves. Factories should, of course, be made to pay for the service perhaps through their licensing fee.

Fast movement on this health front need not, however, be expected unless the Israeli public shows greater awareness of the growing threat to its environment — and of the duty of the authorities to deal with the problem.

The Lebanese report, as cited by the judicial sources yesterday, seemed to be trying to shift the burden of responsibility to Israel, according to diplomats in Beirut. It clearly tried to cover up any responsibility by the Christian militias and appeared to be using Haddad as a scapegoat. Most survivors of the massacre said it was the Lebanese Forces militiamen who carried out the killings. Some said they also saw the insignia of Haddad's militiamen. Any definitive findings would be a political hot potato in Lebanon, where the central government has little effective authority outside the capital and its suburbs.

Unlike Israel, where the massacre inquiry provoked an emotional and political self-examination and led to the removal of Ariel Sharon as defence minister, Lebanon had no public outcry for an investigation. Even criticism by Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem sympathizers was short-lived.

A step too far

By DAVID SAMSON

THE ARTICLE, "A way out of the deadlock" (June 12) was one of the few non-fictional items about medical salaries to emerge from the welter of half-truths and lies gaperated on the subject since the doctors' dispute broke out at the beginning of March.

As one of the many doctors who have mixed feelings about many aspects of the strike, including the way the Finance Ministry has deliberately manipulated and distorted its figures on doctors' wages, I would like to thank the writer David Krivine for explaining simply and lucidly, after a full examination of the facts, that doctors are in fact less well off than other professionals in the public sector, at least as far as basic salaries are concerned.

Having said this, it's all the more a pity that this well-researched analysis of the pay problem was followed by a suggestion to abolish the public health service as a way to end the current conflict. Not of course that such a proposal is in itself invalid. It is rather that the speculative justification for such a radical step stands in sharp contrast to the careful and factually based evaluation which precedes it.

Envisioning a health service system totally restructured along private lines. Krivine declares that every patient will be a customer paying for the treatment he gets, "as the rich do in all countries to this

That is not so. The British National Health Service operates at present almost completely without any such fee-for-service structure, and patients are seen "free" by clinic or hospital doctor alike. There is a charge for prescriptions, but in Israel too the sick funds also levy a small charge for drugs. Private practice in the British NHS is very limited, mainly because patients realize that by and large treatment in the public sector will be just as good. In the British system, family doctors are individually contracted to the government, but this does not prevent the government from helping them obtain and equip suitable clinic premises, paying for auxilliary clerical and medical staff, and providing worthwhile inducements for them to work in the more remote parts of the country. These are certainly the sorts of measures which would be worth copying here, without dismantling the system. Interestingly, in the UK hospital service, senior doctors working fulltime are not allowed to undertake any private practice, but are handsomely recompensed for the loss of this freedom. The proposal is made that those who cannot afford to pay their bills be members of a state-run public health insurance system, which would foot their bills.

This is easy enough to say. However, there is no absolute ability to pay medical bills. In reality that ability is a relative one, with those with the highest bills generally the least able to bear the burden they impose. It was just for this reason that public health services, such as Kupat Holim, were set up in the first place! In any case, we are talking less about being unable to afford an occasional clinic visit, than being overwhelmed by the costs of a complicated series of stomach operations involving several weeks hospitalization. Furthermore, who would decide, and how, who qualifies for such a state-run service and who doesn't? Krivine would like to see the government ensuring that the universities turn out enough physicians so that "competition is keen." But medical education is not a sport, and training a doctor is too expensive a process for setting up a 'keen" competition. In a progressive country, doctors should be produced in numbers and types required to take care of the comprehensive health needs of its population as perceived and determined at a national level.

The insurance system would not reimburse all of the patient's outlay, the article says, for the patient "must have an incentive not to waste the doctor's time and his own money on trivialities."

It's interesting that "trivial" conditions and Illnesses only occur in other people's families and never in one's own, for with one's own family any need for a doctor's services is always deemed justifiable. So it is not surprising that widespread research has shown that, when a visit to the doctor is tied in with a small payment, then the visiting rate doesn't fall perceptibly, or at least returns to its previous level after a temporary "dip." When a significant payment is involved, then of course it's not only "trivial" cases which fail to seek medical help. The argument that reduced demand for medical attention from a more responsible public would "ensure that fees for consultations are moderate." That is merely wishful thinking. The dental profession in this country is run almost entirely along private lines. Are dental fees in Israel moderate?

And wrapping it all up, Krivine states, again without foundation, that by and large the health of the population will not suffer by abolishment of the public health

How can this be stated with such certainty? I don't know for sure what would actually happen. There are, however, pointers from research about the effect of introducing a more than symbolic payment for preventive medical services, such as child-welfare and ante-natal clinics. In such circumstances, there is a rapid and steep decline in attendance at, and participation in, such facilities, particularly on the part of the leas. advantaged sections of the popul
